The Manager, D. H. WHY ELSE ARE THEY THERE?

> THE main purpose of any large dam, in which is installed generating equipment in keeping with the size of the dam, is to generate electricity. Incidental results can be lessening the effects of floods.

No dam can completely eliminate floods, because if there's more than enough rain to fill the lake behind the dam, then the surplus water must run over the dam. But by releasing water from the lake during dry weather, and storing water during rainy weather, the devastation of floods can be lessened; and when they do occur, they come so gradually that persons in lowlands will not be suddenly trapped.

The chief purpose of any hydro-electric development is the generation of electricity. We have six large hydro-electric generating plants in Alabama-on the Coosa and Tallapoosa Rivers. We operate them so as to not only produce an abundance of cheap electricity, but also coordinate their operation in such manner that effects of floods on these rivers. and the Alabama River, which these rivers form, are less than they would be if the dams were not in place.

DURIED" outside of Alabama and the South are billions of dollarsdollars that might be working in the South, and particularly in Alabama, if, in past years, "outside money" had been more fully acquainted with the opportunities for development in the South.

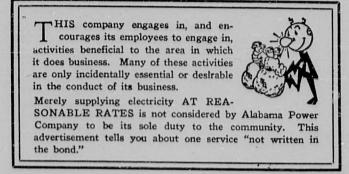

Other "buried" treasure is the money earned and spent and inherited by 31/2 millions of Southern people who have gone elsewhere to live and prosper within the past 30 years-money amounting to 15 to 20 billions of dollars that would have been spent in the South, had the natural resources of the South been developed to the point where these Southerners could have remained at home and prospered-money that would have helped give the South better schools, and roads, and other institutions.

Some Of That Buried Treasure Can Be Brought To Alabama

Of course this treasure is not truly buried. But it might just as well be buried so far as the South is concerned.

This treasure need not be lost to the South forever. During the past 14 years this Company, working with other far-seeing Alabama citizens, has been successful in bringing some of this treasure into Alabama-treasure in the form of new industrial plants-treasure that has helped bring about a more even balance between agricultural and other activities-treasure that has made opportunities for many of the fine girls and boys graduating from Alabama's schools.

Our Industrial Development Department is busier than ever before seeking this "buried treasure" to bring into Alabama for the benefit of ALL
